Hip Brace - The Drawer of Things That Failed

HIP | Solution Aware | TOFU | V1

DESIRE

Stop wasting hope on nothing

AVATAR

Burned-out pain veteran

PERSONA

Tired believer who stopped believing

CONCEPT

The drawer of failed attempts

ANGLE

Everyone with chronic hip pain has a drawer full of things they bought that did nothing, and opening it feels like looking at a graveyard of hope.

CORE MESSAGE

This is the first thing that didn't end up in that drawer.

HOOK 1 — Wait, this is new

"Everyone with hip pain has this drawer. You know the one."

HOOK 2 — This is for me

"I stopped counting how much money is sitting in that drawer doing nothing."

HOOK 3 — Pattern interrupt

"My doctor never told me about the drawer. But she's got one too."

BODY

You know the drawer. The one you don't open anymore. The tube of something that smelled like a pharmacy. The wrap that lost its stretch after a week. The thing you saw at 2am on your phone and thought maybe, maybe this one. You've got receipts in there you don't want to look at. And every time you bought something new, there was this little voice that said this is going to work. And it never did. So you stopped listening to that voice. You stopped trying. You just started living with it. Adjusting. Moving slower. Saying no to things you used to love without even realizing you were doing it. I found this brace because someone I trust told me about it. Not an ad. Not a review. A person who walks the way I used to walk. And now she doesn't. I wore it for three days before I even told anyone. Because I didn't want to hear myself say it's working and then have to take that back. But it's been weeks now. And the drawer is still closed. And I don't think about it anymore.

CTA

Try it for yourself. If it ends up in the drawer, send it back. 365 days to decide.

Hip Brace - Ten Minutes to Put a Sock On

HIP | Problem Aware | TOFU | V1

DESIRE

Do simple things without pain

AVATAR

Quietly struggling adult

PERSONA

Someone who hides how bad it is

CONCEPT

The sock that takes ten minutes

ANGLE

When putting on a sock becomes a ten-minute event, you realize the pain isn't just in your hip — it's in your whole life.

CORE MESSAGE

You shouldn't have to plan your morning around a sock.

HOOK 1 — Wait, this is new

"It took me ten minutes to put on a sock this morning. Ten."

HOOK 2 — This is for me

"Nobody sees the twenty things you can't do before breakfast."

HOOK 3 — Pattern interrupt

"I almost cried putting on a sock. And I don't talk about it."

BODY

You set the alarm earlier now. Not because you're productive. Because everything takes longer. Sitting on the edge of the bed, pulling your knee up and feeling that thing in your hip that says no. Reaching down and your body locks like it's protecting you from yourself. So you figure out a system. Foot on the opposite knee. Lean just enough. Breathe through it. And then you do the other one. And by the time both socks are on, you're already tired. But you don't tell anyone. Because what are you going to say? I can't put my socks on? Nobody wants to be that person. I wore the brace for two days and the third morning I reached down and it was just... normal. No system. No breathing through it. No ten minutes. I sat there with both socks on and didn't move for a second. Because I forgot what that felt like.

CTA

Get the sock on without thinking about it. Try it risk-free for 365 days.

CONCEPT

The drawer

ANGLE

That drawer full of things that were supposed to fix your hip — this one never made it in.

CORE MESSAGE

The last thing you buy for your hip.

HOOK 1 — Wait, this is new

“Everyone with hip pain has a drawer. You know which one.”

HOOK 2 — This is for me

“How much money is sitting in your junk drawer right now?”

HOOK 3 — Pattern interrupt

“The drawer is full. Your hip still hurts.”

BODY

You've bought the creams. The wraps. The thing you saw at midnight that swore it would fix everything. They all ended up in the same place. This didn't.

CTA

Hip Brace - Hand on the Chair Arm

HIP | Problem Aware | TOFU | V1

DESIRE

Stand up without help

AVATAR

Person who plans every movement

PERSONA

Silently compensating

CONCEPT

Hand on the chair arm

ANGLE

The way you press down on the chair arm before standing up tells the whole story.

CORE MESSAGE

Stand up like you used to.

HOOK 1 — Wait, this is new

“You don't just stand up anymore. You launch yourself.”

HOOK 2 — This is for me

“Watch someone with hip pain sit down. They pick the chair before they pick the conversation.”

HOOK 3 — Pattern interrupt

“If you need the armrest to stand, you already know.”

BODY

You press down. You shift your weight. You push. Every time. Nobody notices. But you do. Your hip doesn't let you just stand up and go anymore.

Shoulder Brace - She Does Things Carefully Now

SHOULDER | Problem Aware | TOFU | V1

DESIRE

Move without fear

AVATAR

Person watched by someone who loves them

PERSONA

The one whose partner noticed first

CONCEPT

She does things carefully now

ANGLE

When someone who loves you starts noticing how carefully you move, the pain isn't yours alone anymore.

CORE MESSAGE

You shouldn't have to move like you're made of glass.

HOOK 1 — Wait, this is new

“My husband said something last week that broke me. “You do everything so carefully now.””

HOOK 2 — This is for me

“He didn't say it to be mean. He said it because he's scared.”

HOOK 3 — Pattern interrupt

“When your partner starts watching how you move, the pain isn't just yours anymore.”

BODY

I didn't notice it at first. The way I reach for things with my other hand now. The way I open doors differently. The way I stopped stretching in the morning and started just rolling out of bed like something fragile. But he noticed. He watches me take a mug off the shelf and I can see it in his face. He doesn't say anything anymore because last time I told him I'm fine. But we both know I'm not fine. I'm just managing. I've been wearing the brace for about three weeks now. The first thing that changed wasn't the pain. It was that he stopped watching me. Not because he stopped caring. Because there was nothing to watch anymore. I reached for something the other day and he didn't flinch. I almost didn't notice. But I did.

CTA

Move like nobody's watching. Try it for 365 days, risk-free.

Shoulder Brace - The Seatbelt Grab

SHOULDER | Problem Aware | TOFU | V1

DESIRE

Stop bracing for simple movements

AVATAR

Person ambushed by their own body

PERSONA

Frustrated and caught off guard

CONCEPT

The seatbelt grab

ANGLE

That moment you reach for the seatbelt and your shoulder grabs before your hand does — that's when you know it's not going away.

CORE MESSAGE

Reach for things without your shoulder deciding for you.

HOOK 1 — Wait, this is new

"I reached for the seatbelt and my shoulder made the decision before I did."

HOOK 2 — This is for me

"It's not the big movements. It's the seatbelt. The jacket. The thing behind you on the back seat."

HOOK 3 — Pattern interrupt

"Your shoulder isn't injured. It just vetoes everything now."

BODY

You get in the car. You reach across. And your shoulder says no before your brain even registers it. It's not a sharp pain. It's more like a wall. Like something in there tightened overnight and nobody told you. So you twist your whole body instead. You use your left hand. You adjust. And the person next to you doesn't even notice. But you do. Because you remember when reaching across your body was nothing. When grabbing something off the back seat didn't require a strategy. I've been wearing this brace for about two weeks. Yesterday I clicked my seatbelt without thinking about it. No wall. No twist. I just reached and it was there. And the weird thing is, I almost missed it. It was so normal that I almost didn't notice it happened.

CTA

Reach without thinking about it. 365 days to try it.

Shoulder Brace - Three Sports Bras in a Drawer

SHOULDER | Problem Aware | TOFU | V1

DESIRE

Wear what she used to wear

AVATAR

Active woman sidelined by shoulder pain

PERSONA

Frustrated and missing her old self

CONCEPT

Three sports bras in a drawer

ANGLE

Three sports bras you can't put on anymore because reaching behind your back isn't something you can do now.

CORE MESSAGE

Get back to the version of you that didn't think twice about getting dressed.

HOOK 1 — Wait, this is new

"Three sports bras in a drawer. Not because they don't fit. Because I can't reach behind my back."

HOOK 2 — This is for me

"I switched to front-close everything. Not by choice."

HOOK 3 — Pattern interrupt

"I haven't worn a sports bra in four months. My shoulder decided."

BODY

Three sports bras. All still good. Just sitting there. Because the clasp is in the back and your shoulder won't let you reach anymore.

CTA

Try it for 365 days. Get dressed without planning around your shoulder.

Shoulder Brace - The Empty Half of the Bed

SHOULDER | Problem Aware | TOFU | V1

DESIRE

Sleep on either side again

AVATAR

Restless one-side sleeper

PERSONA

Exhausted and running out of positions

CONCEPT

The empty half of the bed

ANGLE

Half the bed is empty because you can't lie on that side anymore. Your shoulder took it from you.

CORE MESSAGE

Sleep on whichever side you want again.

HOOK 1 — Wait, this is new

"I sleep on one side of the bed now. Not because of anyone else. Because of my shoulder."

HOOK 2 — This is for me

"Half the bed is empty. My shoulder owns that side now."

HOOK 3 — Pattern interrupt

"I haven't rolled over in months. I didn't even realize until I tried."

BODY

One side of the bed. Every night. Not because you prefer it. Because the other side isn't available anymore. Your shoulder claimed it.

CTA

Take your bed back. Try it for 365 days.
